Market Review

Global economic news remained mixed while monetary policies in most major economies remained highly inflationary. Emerging-market equities underperformed those in developed markets as commodity prices remained under pressure and the currencies of commodity-exporting countries continued to weaken against the U.S. dollar. Russia and the West continued to essentially be at war against each other in the Ukraine and Syria. In Europe, the media lost interest in Greece (an unresolved situation) and focused instead on the arrival of millions of refugees from the Balkans, the Middle East, and other distressed nations further east. In Germany, the auto sector came under severe pressure after revelations that Volkswagen had misled regulators on emissions from diesel vehicles. In this environment, the U.S. Federal Reserve decided to keep interest rates at historic lows, the European Central Bank considered ramping up its bond-purchasing program and China devalued its currency.

Portfolio Review

The portfolio experienced high volatility and ended the quarter down 6%. More importantly, however, is that the underlying companies performed as assumed. I was especially pleased to see that the CEO of the portfolio's second-largest holding decided to cut back overly aggressive growth plans and to initiate a share buyback (something I had been proposing to him).

Investment Philosophy

iolite Partners is a boutique investment firm I founded in 2008 to manage concentrated portfolios of global value investments. The sole focus is on generating the best possible performance over a long period of time.

I see myself as a value investor. That is, I invest in undervalued securities instead of betting on the development of the market as a whole. I buy securities if the market price is below my fair value estimate. I do not believe in timing the market as this would be speculation. Neither do I believe in overweighting certain countries or industries simply to beat a certain index. I avoid leverage and try to minimize complexity in order to provide better protection from permanent capital loss.
